D. M. CLEWELL has arrived home from his trip with the Fishland excursionists, reaching Ravenna last Friday afternoon, over the Pennsylvania line. He is the picture of health and physical robustness, and evidences a goodly measure of avordupois added to his ante-voyage weight.
Mr. Clewell says one of the delights of the trip, he said, with hearty satisfaction, to our inquiry concerning his general health and experiences en route.
Among other home blessings to be appreciated, he says that the privilege of a drink of good water whenever any one is ailing, is beyond price. Another feature of the long "pilgrimage" that has impressed him very forcibly, is the fact that there was not a life lost or a single case of serious sickness among the 430 excursionists. Only one accident happened to in any way mar the enjoyment of the tourists. One of the party broke his leg while at the Bermudas, and was obliged to remain there for recovery, thereby missing the balance of the trip.
Mr. Clewell says one of the annoyances or rather inconveniences encountered, especially in Egypt and the Orient, is the almost utter absence of the Yankee tongue, except the so-called English of the guides. While at Rome, they stopped at one of the leading hotels, and the manager, who prided himself on his Anglican proficiency of speech, one day posted up the following notice on the elevator, which by the way, is the slow going kind operated by water motor: "The lift do not go up. Of course they are no water."
All Ravenna is glad to welcome this genial citizen and business man home again.

The Easter Opening at Mrs. A. H. PARSONS, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week, attracted hundreds of people to this enterprising house. The announcement alone of "Easter at Mrs. Parsons" never fails to crowd her well stocked rooms, for there is no place like this one during the season of seasons. People have learned to expect the best at this establishment, and they are never disappointed.
But the half can never be told of this memorable Opening, pronounced by the critics to be one of the finest ever held in Ravenna.
Case after case of Ribbons and Ornaments, row above row of Hats that the Queen of Fairyland might envy; a case of rare and beautiful flowers, and a general and generous stock of Millinery Goods, made up a display of marvellous beauty, variety and cleanliness.
In Trimmed Hats alone, there were over six score individual specimens, no two of which were alike—a remarkable variety secured so early in the season.
In shapes, the Tribby, Napoleon and Little Dutch were prominently noticeable.
The changes are very decided this year, not only in material, but in combinations, shapes and colors. "Hat bouquets" might be appropriately applied to the finery creations, in nearly all of which the flowers are mixed in charming disregard of rule or conventional art.
It appears to us that nature has been more closely imitated this year than ever before, and the effects are correspondingly real and abiding. Art has hidden art.
Two of the newest colors are "Ophelia" and "Cecile," but no particular color predominates. Every one consults personal preference, and is in style.
The latest novelty in straw is what is known as patent leather straw. It is unique.
In Trimmings, ribbons and flowers predominate. Rhinestones and jet cabochons, buckles and ornaments, are used largely while lace, crepe, chiffon, Princess tips, Aigrettes, etc., are prominent.
The Ribbons are exquisite in colors and shadings of which there is no end. We noticed particularly among the Dresden assortment many beautiful specimens in the striped, checked and changeable.
The "Prize Hat," made up of a white Leghorn crown, and trimmed with various expensive imported ornaments, was so constructed as to render it difficult indeed to one not a milliner to judge approximately of its price. The person guessing nearest the exact price was to receive a $5.00 due bill, to apply on any one hat in the store. Miss Catherine Willard guessed the exact figures—$10.35—and was awarded the prize.
During the Opening very acceptable piano music was rendered by Miss Hotchkiss.

EASTER WINDOWS.

It seems as though there could be "nothing new under the sun," in this phase of human invention, but each year our merchants and business men demonstrate to the contrary. Some unique as well as handsome effects were produced this season, that are worthy of complimentary mention.
D. M. CLEWELL'S windows were very attractive. The west one was filled with a new and beautiful selection of white parasols, while its companion to the east was resplendent in flowers and fancy wall silks—a brain new arrangement.
W. T. McCOSKEY had a window of chickens, just out and coming out, with a weasel in the background figuring out his "Easter." The picture was completed by a little girl who seemed intent on viewing the scene.
F. P. CHAPMAN had something as new as creation's morn, as usual. An Easter egg, resting on a golden chariot drawn by a pair of doves, driven by a fairy, was the central figure of the "Easter Greeting" window, the character of which was announced by a neatly executed card picture in a large frame with inscription and a cupid "just out" from his egg prison, and looking into the astonished "face" of his "mother," Madame Kluck. Two large callas, with white slipper blossoms contributed to the novelty of the scene. The west window was filled with the finest lot of shoes ever exhibited in Ravenna, with egg price marks in each shoe. The "Irish Linen Shirts" is something entirely new, exhibited for the first time in Ravenna by Chapman.
D. F. REED, the Clothier, had his windows filled with a fine lot of goods that advertised well the resources of this house.
C. A. MYERS had one of the tastiest windows in town, truly beautiful in its simplicity. A very large and handsome rubber plant standing side by side with a well grown palm near the attention of every passer by. The ground work was apple green and pink, with a background of pendant wall paper, pink and green.
J. C. CLARK, the Phenix dry goods merchant, is exceedingly happy in his conceptions of Easter windows, and we do not remember to have seen anything combining better taste and skill than his artistic arrangement of this season.

THE BEATY'S had their windows blossoming with tulips and adorned with palms that displayed to good advantage their splendid samples of fine clothing, the latest styles in hats, neckwear, etc.
W. T. HART, the Opera House druggist, had a window full of eggs, some being labeled "Birds of Paradise." W. T., as usual, made a hit.
MONSEY & CHALFANT, merchant tailors, exhibited some fine Spring suitings, from the mills of the Turner Sons.
F. C. PARK, the Jeweler, had a charming window filled with a wonderful variety of gold and silver goods, exquisite in design and perfect in workmanship. He leads.
W. S. KRAKE, had an original window. There were eggs in Easter, and Easter in eggs, "Easter" being lettered in white eggs, with a brown egg border. A lot of geese eggs were scattered promiscuously around and a very parental looking pair of fowls were taking in the situation with much complacency.
George Risk, of Kent, son of Commissioner Risk, has recovered from his recent severe attack of pneumonia, and is calling on Ravenna friends today.
County Recorder elect, Frank Jones, and family of Randolph, will move to Ravenna about June 1st, and occupy the handsome residence property of Mrs. R. B. Witter, at the corner of Chestnut and Cedar streets.
C. C. Byers returned from a business trip through the New England States last Friday. While at Providence, R. I., he met Harry Oakley, son of J. H. Oakley, of this place. The young man is on the road for the American Cereal Co., and is doing well.
Ravenna traveling men report a slow but steady progress throughout the country toward the complete restoration of business confidence. They say that the general conditions are very much improved over last year, but buyers are still rather timid.
